

CoB Policy on Late Internship Registration:

“If you fail to register your internship on time, for whatever reason, you are responsible for any consequences that result from your failure to register. These consequences may include things such as having to pay tuition for the internship, not being certified for graduation on time, etc. For example, a senior who fails to register an internship by the beginning of his or her final semester will not be certified for graduation in that semester. The internship would then be registered for the following semester with tuition charged for the three hour credits. The student would not be certified for graduation (issued a diploma) until August or even possibly December of the same year. Internships will not be backdated to previous semesters.”
